

CPA Evolution - Proposed New Model for CPA Licensure – Provide Your Feedback Now

AICPA and NASBA continue to review feedback from various stakeholders, such as state CPA societies, state boards of accountancy, academia, firms of all sizes and CPAs in all areas of practice from across the country regarding the proposed NEW model for becoming a CPA. Multiple options were considered before developing the most current approach, which is still a draft model and not considered final.

AICPA and NASBA recommend a core + disciplines model, with a strong core in accounting, auditing, tax and technology, which all CPA candidates would be required to complete. Each CPA candidate would choose a discipline where they can demonstrate deeper skills and knowledge. One thing to keep in mind – a discipline selected for testing does NOT mean the CPA would be limited to that practice area.

= CPA

AICPA and NASBA will continue to gather stakeholder feedback into 2020, with the intent of finalizing the model in summer 2020, establishing implementation plans through a multi-year effort. Let your voice be heard and submit your comments to Feedback@EvolutionofCPA.org. For complete details on the proposed model, visit <https://www.evolutionofcpa.org/Images/CPAEvolutionDecember2019.pdf>

The ARCPA wishes you a happy and safe Christmas and New Year! We look forward to serving you in 2020!

CPE Reporting

Made easy & convenient!

The Arkansas Society of CPAs and the Arkansas State Board of Public Accountancy will continue to make year-end CPE reporting easy for our members.

The ARCPA began transmitting 2019 CPE data for all members to the State Board on November 15th and every Friday thereafter. The State Board imports this information into their database so that when you go online to renew your license, all CPE data appears in your renewal form on the State Board's website. The ARCPA will be closed December 23rd – 25th. A final transmittal will be sent on Monday, December 30th.

Steps to make sure your CPE is transmitted to the State Board correctly

Check Your CPE Tracker on the ARCPA website:

Make sure your CPE tracker on the ARCPA website is correct. You can easily track your CPE by logging in to the ARCPA website. Under the My ARCPA tab, select My CPE & Events, then select View Tracker. Contact the ARCPA if there are any errors in your CPE tracker.

Adding CPE to your Tracker:

All courses taken through the ARCPA are automatically loaded to your CPE tracker on the ARCPA website. If you have taken CPE from other sponsors, add them to your CPE tracker on the ARCPA website so that all your CPE data is transmitted to the State Board.

How to add CPE taken from other sponsors to your CPE Tracker:

- Login to your account on the website at www.arcpa.org
- Under the My ARCPA tab, select My CPE & Events, then select View Tracker.
- To manually add CPE from other sponsors to your tracker, select Add Course.
- Enter all required course information and click Add.
- When all your CPE is listed, you can print a copy of your transcript for your records.

Manually entering CPE on the renewal screen will prevent ARCPA data from loading:

If a licensee starts entering CPE manually on the State Board website, any subsequent CPE data files sent from the ARCPA will not load into that licensee's renewal records.

Please note: Members are responsible for the accuracy of course information added to their CPE tracker. This is a member-only advantage. If you are a non-member you still have an option to view your CPE Tracker on the website, but your CPE data will not be transmitted to the State Board.

For questions regarding your CPE tracker, please contact the ARCPA at 501-664-8739.

Apples + Oranges = Risks in nontraditional acquisitions

CPA firms looking for growth often seek it from the acquisition of other firms or practices or by recruiting individual "rainmakers." However, more recent acquisitions are trending toward firms providing alternative services delivered by non-CPAs, rather than traditional audit or tax. Any acquisition by a CPA firm involves professional liability risk, but there are special considerations to identify and address with nontraditional acquisitions. Navigating through the acquisition, onboarding, and integration of nontraditional professionals can be tricky.

Consider one firm that acquired an IT consulting practice to help implement machine-learning capabilities for its client accounting services (CAS) practice and delivery of IT consulting services to the firm's clients.

Unfortunately, the machine-learning process implemented by the IT practice regularly misclassified nondeductible expenses as deductible. This error was detected when the IRS audited one of the firm's CAS clients. The firm's investigation identified the root cause of the error and the impact to more than 100 CAS clients. The CPA firm eventually lost many of these clients and faced claims for penalties, interest, and costs to amend the clients' tax returns.

What went wrong? To start, the IT practice was not integrated with the CPA firm, and this resulted in a lack of communication between the IT, tax, and CAS practices. Consequently, the scope and objective of the machine-learning project was not clearly understood by all parties. Additionally, because the CAS and tax practice did not fully understand the complexity of the IT team's work, it did not fully review or test the accuracy of the output, instead assuming it was correct. In the end, the CPA firm learned an expensive lesson on how not to work with nontraditional professionals.

As client needs and demands have become increasingly complex, CPA firms have evolved to meet these needs and will continue to do so. Whether it's IT, data privacy, human resources, or something else, the trend to acquire expertise in nontraditional practice areas is not going away and neither is the related professional liability risk. Just like apples and oranges, while CPA and non-CPA professionals are similar, the differences present unique risks, warranting a different approach to risk management, as explained in the following tips.

DUE DILIGENCE

Skills and experience

Evaluate the competence, skills, and expertise in a nontraditional professional's area of practice and/or industry. Research the potential target, along with its owners and key professionals to assess their experience and expertise. Ensure relevant credentialing and licensing are current and all professionals are in good standing. Consider the CPA firm that hired a litigation support expert who had misrepresented his credentials during the hiring process. After this was discovered and made public, the firm faced claims from clients asserting that their cases were irreparably damaged by the "expert's" work. If the CPA firm had verified his credentials during due diligence, it would have known to stay away.

Quality control

Determine whether a nontraditional practice has effective quality-control (QC) processes and evaluate its tone toward QC. Consider the CPA firm that acquired a medical billing company. The company's software contained an erroneous billing validation code that, because the QC process was ineffective, was not identified. The CPA firm identified the error after the acquisition when several medical practice clients sued the CPA firm for improper patient billing. Review the target's professional liability claim history to identify trends or systemic issues.

INTEGRATION

Culture

Do not underestimate the importance of culture. Integrating different "personalities" and cultures can prove challenging. Although both CPA and consulting firms deliver professional services to clients for fees, their processes and philosophies may be very different.

For instance, "business casual" for a CPA in Chicago may not be the same as it is for an IT professional in San Francisco. While a different dress code is not a professional liability risk, it is an example of how consultants' mindset may differ from CPAs'.

Consider differences in compensation and organizational structure. CPA firms tend to be more pyramid-like versus flat. Compensation at consulting firms may be more heavily weighted toward new business development than at a CPA firm.

Change can be challenging, but if differences are timely identified and addressed proactively, the combination will have a greater likelihood of success. Having the leaders of a nontraditional practice communicate and support the changes is important. If cultural differences are insurmountable, pull the plug quickly. While painful, it can save months, or even years, of unwanted stress, wasted internal time, increased risk, and discord within the firm.

CPA firm requirements

Nontraditional firms and CPA firms may operate very differently. As a result, there will likely be new considerations and practices for the nontraditional professionals to adopt, such as:

Professional standards: As CPA firm employees, nontraditional professionals are typically subject to the same professional standards as CPAs, regardless of not being a licensed CPA. Do they understand their responsibility to abide by AICPA professional standards such as the Code of Professional Conduct? One possible way to address this concern that firms could consider would be to have HR obtain affirmation from all non-CPA professionals that they understand the Code.

Engagement letters: Nontraditional firms may not use engagement letters. Educate both their professionals and clients about the purpose and importance of engagement letters. Additionally, because many consulting projects are fluid and change during the engagement, train these professionals on the importance of avoiding scope creep, emphasizing the need to obtain a new engagement letter or change order for additional work.

Client acceptance: Evaluate the nontraditional firm's client list to ensure the clients are a good fit for the CPA firm. Stay alert for situations that may impair independence or create conflicts of interest. Prioritize clients with work-in-process and then look at large and/or riskier clients if time is a factor. Consider the CPA firm that acquired a business valuation firm and did not compare client lists. The CPA firm discovered, too late, that the acquired firm's services impaired the firm's independence for a large attest client. The firm faced a potential claim when the client had to engage another firm to reperform the attest service.

Fees, profitability, and billing: Are the nontraditional practice's billing, collection, and profitability management processes similar to or different from the CPA firm's? How will the nontraditional professionals, and their clients, respond to changes? Contingency fees and commissions charged by the nontraditional practice may need to be revisited to ensure compliance with professional standards.

Oversight

Many professional liability claims arise when acquired firms or individuals are allowed to operate without oversight.

How do you oversee "experts" if the firm has no relevant technical expertise? Monitor the nontraditional professionals' compliance with the firm's QC procedures. Perform a "cold read" of deliverables. Ensure the professionals follow the applicable professional standards and regulatory requirements. If systemic issues are identified, consider incorporating these items with the training provided on the firm's policies and procedures.

ACT AS ONE FIRM

In sum, the acquired firm needs to become part of your firm. Include its staff members on engagement teams and firm initiatives. Provide them with "buddies," even at the principal level. Mix workstations so nontraditional professionals are sitting with CPAs. Invite them to social activities. Work to make sure everyone has a similar vision, strategy, and culture. Nontraditional acquisitions typically require more due diligence and integration efforts, but the result can be a delicious fruit salad, with just the right mix of apples and oranges.

A framework for maintaining ethics compliance

Defending a professional liability claim can be complicated. The plaintiff and CPA firm defendant often disagree about the scope of service, the amount of damages, the firm's compliance with the applicable standard of care, and more. Resolving these differences becomes more difficult if the firm's independence, integrity, or objectivity is brought into question. Indeed, the mere suggestion of a potential independence violation or conflict of interest can negatively affect or thwart an otherwise good defense.

Consider the following claim made against a CPA firm in the AICPA Professional Liability Insurance Program:

A CPA firm performed an audit of a fund of funds for many years. The attest client's CFO had previously worked for the CPA firm and had started on the same day as the firm's engagement partner. The attest client invested in a number of hedge funds. During the 2008 economic downturn, many of these hedge funds failed and were discovered to be Ponzi schemes. The client subsequently declared bankruptcy, resulting in a complete loss to its investors. The investors filed a $20 million claim against the audit firm, asserting that more information about the funds should have been disclosed in the financial statement notes. Had these disclosures been made, the investors asserted they would have redeemed their shares prior to the bankruptcy.

An expert hired by the CPA firm's insurance company opined that the firm's audit work and documentation appeared to comply with the applicable standard of care. However, concern was raised regarding emails between the audit partner and the attest client CFO that suggested the CFO leveraged his relationship with the partner and firm to modify disclosures related to the hedge funds. The claim ultimately settled.

The AICPA Code of Professional Conduct (the Code), state board of accountancy rules, and other sources identify situations that may impair independence or threaten a CPA's integrity or objectivity. However, the standards do not, and cannot, address and provide an answer for every situation.

Enter the conceptual framework (see the "Conceptual Framework for Members in Public Practice" (ET

§1.000.010)) and its application to independence (see the "Conceptual Framework for Independence" (ET §1.210.010)) and conflicts of interest (see the "Conflicts of Interest for Members in Public Practice" interpretation (ET §1.110.010)). This framework provides a methodology for identifying, evaluating, and addressing threats to compliance with the Code resulting from a specific relationship or circumstance not otherwise explicitly addressed in the Code. The structured thought process provided by the conceptual framework helps CPAs to reflect upon a set of facts and arrive at a reasoned conclusion.

EASY AS 1-2-3 (AND 4)

The Code lays out a simple, three-step approach. From a professional liability perspective, an additional step is suggested.

Step 1: Identify threats

The Code recognizes that most threats to compliance can be categorized into seven types:

Adverse interest: When the CPA's interests are in opposition to the client's.

Advocacy: Promoting the client's interests or position.

Familiarity: Being too sympathetic to the client's interests due to a long association between the CPA and the client.

Management participation: Taking on a management role or assuming management responsibilities for a client.

Self-interest: Benefiting, financially or otherwise, from an interest in or a relationship with a client.

Self-review: The inability to appropriately evaluate evidence, judgments, or services performed by the CPA or the CPA's firm.

Undue influence: Subordination of the CPA's judgment to a client or third party.

Professional liability claims include allegations of familiarity threats more than other threats. Longtime clients, casual emails, and an engagement team with multiple years of experience with the client all may pose familiarity threats. Management participation and/or self-review threats may exist when nonattest services are delivered to an attest client. A self-interest threat may exist if client fees constitute a significant portion of the firm's revenue. An engagement team brainstorming session may help identify threats not previously considered.

Step 2: Evaluate the significance of identified threats

Evaluate the significance of each identified threat to determine if it is at an acceptable level. For many threats, the Code provides specific guidance regarding which threats cannot be reduced to an acceptable level and, thus, impair independence or result in a conflict of interest. For all other threats, the evaluation of their significance should be viewed in the context of a "reasonable and informed third party who is aware of the relevant information" (see paragraph .07 of the "Conceptual Framework for Members in Public Practice") and include both qualitative and quantitative factors. To help mitigate professional liability risk, consider evaluating the significance of the threats from the perspective of a plaintiff's attorney and potential jurors. A plaintiff's attorney will use all available evidence, including emails, to discredit the CPA. Jurors will be influenced by other factors beyond the expert testimony, such as their own perception of what a CPA should be responsible for. Unfortunately, hindsight does not typically favor the CPA.

Step 3: Identify, evaluate, and apply safeguards

If the identified threat is not at an acceptable level, safeguards — actions or other measures that may eliminate the threat or reduce it to an acceptable level — should be identified and applied. For some threats, a single safeguard may be appropriate. For others, multiple safeguards may be more effective. The Code identifies several examples of safeguards created by the profession or that can be implemented by the firm or client. The effectiveness of a particular safeguard depends upon many factors, including how it is applied and who applies it, whether the client is a public interest entity, and more. CPA judgment is involved in making this determination.

Step 4: Document and share

Documentation, one of a CPA firm's most important allies in claim defense, is especially important in areas involving CPA judgment, including the evaluation of independence threats and potential conflicts of interest. Therefore, in addition to the Code's documentation requirements, consider documenting the firm's evaluation process, not just the outcome. Documentation could include how the evaluation was performed and the factors considered when evaluating the significance of a threat or the appropriateness of a safeguard. In a claim situation, a CPA firm's judgment and conclusions may be questioned or challenged. A lack of documentation allows a plaintiff's attorney to draw his or her own conclusions, which may differ from the CPA's.

Share the evaluation and conclusion with engagement team members and even the client, especially if these parties are responsible for implementing safeguards. Consider including the client's responsibilities regarding any safeguards under their purview in the engagement letter or other client communication.

APPLYING THE CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK TO OTHER ETHICS CONSIDERATIONS

Questions of independence are problematic in defense of attest claims. Questions of integrity or objectivity, especially those related to conflicts of interest, are problematic in defense of claims related to nonattest services. To help mitigate this risk, consider applying the conceptual framework approach to any relationship or circumstance that threatens the CPA's compliance with the Code.

SECURE Act Included in Year-End Spending Package

By Rachel Parsia

After months of stalled progress in the Senate, Congress is expected to pass the Setting Every Community Up for Retirement Enhancement Act (“SECURE” Act). On December 16, 2019, the SECURE Act was attached to a $1.4 trillion year-end spending bill that Congress must pass by December 20, 2019 in order to avoid a government shutdown. The House passed the spending package on December 17, 2019, and it will now head to the Senate before expected signature into law by President Trump.

BACKGROUND

It is no secret that the current U.S. retirement system is complicated, and many Americans lack sufficient funds to retire comfortably. In fact, the Social Security Board of Trustees estimates that by 2035 taxes will be enough to pay for only 75 percent of scheduled benefits. The SECURE Act attempts to reform the current U.S. retirement system by expanding benefits for more Americans and providing greater access to retirement savings programs.

In May 2019, the SECURE Act passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of 417-3, but quickly stalled in the Senate despite having strong bipartisan support. After passing in the House, the Senate attempted to pass the SECURE Act through “unanimous consent,” also known as “hotlining.” This is an abbreviated way to quickly decide on the passage of a bill without the usual process of floor debates and amendments. It was derailed by Senators Ted Cruz (R-TX) and Pat Toomey (R-PA), who requested amendments be made to the SECURE Act prior to passage. Notably, Sens. Cruz and Toomey proposed allowing 529 Plans to cover expenses of K-12 students and home-schooled students. Their amendments were removed from the original House legislation by Speaker Nancy Pelosi prior to sending the bill to the Senate.

SIGNIFICANT CHANGES

The SECURE Act aims to increase access to tax-advantaged retirement accounts, especially for small businesses and their employees. The current text of the SECURE Act includes many changes to existing retirement laws, with the most notable changes outlined below:

Stretch IRA

- Current Law: Non-spouse beneficiaries of IRAs can “stretch” minimum distributions over their own lifetime, which allows funds to grow tax-free for an extended period of time.
- SECURE Act: Funds from inherited IRAs would be required to be distributed within 10 years of the IRA owner’s death.

Raised Age Limits

- Current Law: At age 70 ½, individuals are required to withdraw a required minimum distribution (“RMD”) each year. After age 70 ½, individuals can no longer contribute to traditional IRAs (Roth IRAs have no age limit).
- SECURE Act: Individuals could wait until age 72 to begin taking RMDs, which would defer the tax impact of withdrawals and allow savings to accumulate longer. In addition, there would be no age limitation on Roth or Traditional IRA contributions.

Coverage for Part-Time Employees:

- Current Law: Employers may exclude part-time employees from 401(k) savings plans.
- SECURE Act: Employees who work 1,000 hours throughout the year or have three consecutive years of at least 500 hours of service would be eligible to participate in a 401(k) savings plan.

Small Business Tax Credit

- Current Law: Employers are eligible for up to a $500 credit for implementing new retirement plans.
- SECURE Act: Employers could receive up to a $5,000 credit for creating new retirement plans. Additionally, a new $500 tax credit would be available to small businesses to encourage automatic enrollment in retirement plans.

Multi-Employer 401(k) Plans

- Current Law: It is costly and burdensome for many small businesses to offer 401(k) plans.
- SECURE Act: Small business employers could join multiple-employer plans or “open MEPS,” which have reduced costs and reduced regulatory barriers, expanding access for their employees to participate in retirement savings plans.

Access to Annuity Options

- Current Law: Many 401(k) plans do not offer annuities due to liability concerns.
- SECURE Act: Plan providers will have decreased liability concerns when offering annuities to participants of 401(k) plans.

Automatic Enrollment Safe Harbor

- Current Law: Employers may set a contribution rate for employees who participate in an auto-enrollment 401(k) plan. Currently, this contribution rate may not exceed 10%.
- SECURE Act: Employers can raise the contribution rate to 15% for employees.

Birth and Adoption Expenses

- Current Law: There is a 10% early withdrawal penalty on 401(k) distributions.
- SECURE Act: Following the birth or adoption of a child, married individuals could withdraw up to $5,000 from their 401(k) accounts without paying the 10% early withdrawal penalty.

Expansion of §529 Plans

- Current Law: Student loan repayments are not considered qualified education expenses.
- SECURE Act: Funds in §529 College Savings Plans could be used to repay qualified student loan repayments, up to $10,000.

Kiddie Tax

- Current Law: The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017 (“TCJA”) implemented “Kiddie Tax” measures that tax unearned income of children above $2,200 at the top marginal tax rates for trusts and estates.
- SECURE Act: The “Kiddie Tax” rules would revert to pre-TCJA law, in which a child’s unearned income above the threshold would be taxed at the parent’s marginal tax rate.

If passed, the SECURE Act will be the most significant retirement legislation from Congress in over a decade. Be sure to check www.surgentcpe.com for the latest, up-to-date information and webinars regarding the SECURE Act.

ARCPA Attends Fall on Campus Student Events

As part of a major nationwide effort and initiative to increase student awareness of accounting careers, and enhance the CPA pipeline to the accounting profession, ARCPA representatives have attended several student-related events this Fall.

Southern Arkansas University Visit

Marsha Moffitt, ARCPA Executive Director & CEO, and George W. Foster, III Chair, visited students on November 21. The visit included a presentation during lunch to accounting students. Marsha Moffitt and George Foster spoke to students about the benefits of being an AICPA and ARCPA student member and the importance of the CPA Exam. Students learned about the career opportunities for CPAs and the steps necessary to become a CPA.

Visit to ASU Mountain Home

George Foster and Marsha Moffitt attended an on-campus visit to Arkansas State University Mountain Home on November 14. The event, which was hosted by the Ozark Chapter of CPAs, included 16 CPAs, and 50 business and accounting students throughout the day. The day-long program was coordinated by ASU Mountain Home instructors and staff and the Ozark Chapter of CPAs. The visit included a presentation to students on steps to become a CPA. Students received a logoed bag and provided printed materials, including a booklet on careers in accounting, and salaries. Students received membership information on how to join ARCPA and AICPA. Also, students were given a booklet with steps for transferring from a two-year program to a four-year academic program to pursue an accounting degree.

This Way to Ph.D

Have you ever considered going back to school to obtain your Ph.D. in Accounting? The AICPA Foundation's William (Bill) Ezzell Scholarship provides financial assistance to CPAs pursuing a doctorate degree in Accounting. Bill Ezzell was a past Chair of the AICPA Board of Directors who believed that the best way to encourage the next generation of CPAs was to put educators in the classroom who have relevant and recent real-world experience. This scholarship honors Bill's passion and continues his legacy by providing financial assistance to CPAs wanting to pursue a Ph.D. in Accounting. Visit <https://bit.ly/2Z8bjuc> for more information. INCREASE RECURRING REVENUE, MARGINS & VALUATIONS: ADD WEALTH MANAGEMENT IN 2020!

Adding wealth management- financial planning, advisory, and investment management, to your practice is easier than you might suspect. Becoming an Investment Advisor Representative (IAR) of ClientFirst requires only one exam-Series 65. (Click Here for course description) ClientFirst Wealth Management is a Fee-Only Registered Investment Advisor (RIA) and Fiduciary managing over $150,000,000 for Arkansans. We do not sell products or earn commissions. You may have seen our presentations in December at the AFTI conference as well as the recent CPE event hosted by theUCA College of Business.

ClientFirst is assembling a network of CPA/IAR Partners around the state-smaller firms, including sole practitioners. CPA/IAR Partner compensation is 50-60% of the gross revenue generated by wealth management clients. ClientFirst issues a 1099 and pays all expenses. A typical $500,000 wealth management account generates $5,000 per year in gross revenue. Unlike referrals or becoming a paid solicitor under Rule 408 of the Board of Accountancy Rules & Regulations, you continue to manage the client relationship and maintain complete control. We collaborate with you to create your client's comprehensive financial plan-step one in our process-driven approach. We then implement the financial plan utilizing asset allocation models featuring cost-effective ETFs, through our partner and custodian, Charles Schwab.

CPA/IAR Partners experience a highly-collaborative relationship with exceptional service from a firm providing over 35 years of industry experience. Clients benefit from a proven, transparent, approach that is easy to understand- one of many reasons why ClientFirst enjoys very high client retention. ClientFirst is dedicated to helping small CPA firms deliver exceptional wealth management to their clients.

A 2019 study of Arkansas CPA firms revealed that larger firms have harnessed the recurring revenue of wealth management as an engine of growth much faster than smaller firms. An AICPA survey referred to Personal Financial Planning (PFP) as a "natural evolution for CPA firms." You already know every aspect of your clients' financial lives and studies show that many clients would prefer to work with their trusted CPA for their wealth management needs.

If you are interested in learning more and identifying your firm's recurring revenue potential presented by the addition of wealth management, please contact Ed Mahaffy, MBA, CFP®, ChFC®

The image shows a portion of a tax form with various lines for income, deductions, and taxes. A prominent red arrow points to line 22, which displays a tax balance due of $150,00. The form includes sections for 'Standard Deduction for', 'Refund', and 'Amount You Owe'.

Large Balance Due? Married Filing Jointly?

STOP BEFORE YOU FILE

Do your clients have unusually large tax balance due? Have you asked them how they intend to pay the tax? If you don't, that is professional negligence. If you do ask and the answer is they don't know or can't pay, STOP. Additional professional advice should be sought.

DO NOT ALLOW A COUPLE TO FILE MARRIED FILING JOINTLY WITHOUT CONSIDERING THE ALTERNATIVE OF EACH SPOUSE FILING SEPARATELY

Allowing your clients to make an irrevocable election to file jointly, exposing both spouses' assets and income to IRS/DFA collection, when filing separately might limit exposure to only one spouse is professional malpractice. Filing jointly to save taxes is not the primary consideration when the tax liability may not be able to be paid. The couple can amend to file jointly later if the tax can be paid.

Any taxpayer expecting a large balance due and an uncertain ability to pay could use the benefit of advice about the tax collection process and any options available, preferably before filing. Most professional return preparers rarely have such clients, but if and when you do, recognize that your client will be now dealing with tax collection, not fully familiar to preparers.

Much can be done to help clients in such a situation. I welcome a call from professional preparers to discuss alternatives as far in advance of the filing date as possible.
